Proud winners of the NTDA’s Tyre Wholesaler of the Year 2015
INTRODUCTION

As predicted, 2015 proved to be another great year for the Association and in order to not repeat what has already been written by the Director, I commend to you the Annual Report on pages 8 and 10, which highlights many of the key areas of activity.

For me personally, the NTDA Tyre Industry Conference kindly sponsored by Zenises, has to be one of the highlights and we are most fortunate that many of the outstanding speakers at that event, have agreed to complement their presentations with articles in this publication. It is, I believe, testimony to the growth and renewed energy of our Association, that we then followed the conference by hosting our biggest Annual Dinner in recent decades a clear indication that it is now the tyre industry’s premier event and I thank Continental for its sole sponsorship of what was truly a wonderful evening.

The Directorate Team at Aylesbury is now working on the 2016 event and further details can be found on page 11. I hope to see you there!

Of course, the ongoing success of the Association depends heavily upon the commitment and contributions made by members. In our regional committees, Executive Council and working groups, members devote their time to ensuring the NTDA remains one step ahead of industry developments, generously sharing knowledge and expertise for the benefit of the tyre industry as a whole. As such, I would like to take this opportunity to thank all of our members whose continued involvement in such activity helps us to retain our position as the leading trade body representing the UK’s tyre wholesale, distribution, retail and associated sectors. An Association is only as strong as its members and with a growing, thriving and engaged membership such as ours, the NTDA is strong indeed!

As National Chairman, I shall continue to offer my support, advice and collaboration to the Director Stefan Hay, and his team, as their efforts continue to ensure that the NTDA is a successful, prosperous trade association fully equipped to meet the many and varied challenges that the coming year is set to bring.

I close by also thanking all of the suppliers that have advertised this year and the many editorial and other contributors who enable us to produce our flagship publication which remains the most comprehensive directory and source of information in our industry.

Best Wishes for 2016,

Roger Griggs,
NTDA National Chairman

In tough economic times, it’s important to choose your business partners wisely. At Hankook, we understand your need for proven quality and long-lasting performance from a tyre. That’s what Hankook delivers. Combine that with our proactive service and you now have a formula for unbeatable value. Hankook, better tyres from a better tyre company; that’s what drives our confidence in our work.
Membership Activity

2015 saw great progress in the regions. The North West / North Wales Region and Northern Ireland Region continued to organise meetings on a regular basis to which they also invited interesting guest speakers. Over the last year, in addition to the obvious benefits of networking, the members of these two regions enjoyed presentations and demonstrations across a range of topics including training, waste management, wheel alignment, TPMS, engine lubrication management, new pension regulations, part worn tyres, start/stop technologies and EU Tyre Labelling, to name but a few. There were also factory visits and lively discussions about market conditions. Both regions hosted major social events in November, which attracted more than 80 guests.

In July, the new South East region hosted a very successful meeting under the Chairmanship of Prashant Chopra of Autogem Invicta Ltd. This was a great opportunity for suppliers to meet with retailers and discuss what they can do to enhance the industry.

In August the Association welcomed 23 of the great and good from the truck tyre supplier sector to its new Truck Tyre Supplier Forum, which gave the NTDA a positive steer on what this group of its membership wanted the Association to deliver. It was clear that companies remained concerned about the lack of ability in the industry to attract, train and retain good people now and even more so in the future. The quality of some companies, and their employees, operating in our industry was also a major topic of concern.

As a direct result of these discussions with members, the NTDA committed to:

- Positioning the REACT Working Safely at the Roadside licence as the de facto standard for roadside tyre technicians;
- Developing an Apprenticeship Cooperative which will see us working to develop a network of FE colleges and training providers that can offer apprenticeships to members signed up to the cooperative;
- Producing career guidance materials for schools and colleges and service leavers to be designed to attract both young and experienced people with transferable skills into our industry;
- Developing a Gold / Silver / Bronze membership standards assessment scheme for NTDA membership.

Membership Growth

Membership enquiries from across the UK remained extremely brisk in 2015, which was another phenomenal year of growth. Attercliffe Tyres Ltd, Autoparts UK, Barry Tyre Centre Ltd, Blackheath Tyres Ltd, DSW Motor Factors, GB Tyres Ltd, GT Tyres (Ceredigion) Ltd, Littlehampton Tyre & Exhaust Ltd, Hometyre Group Ltd, M60 Tyres Ltd, Mid Beds Tyres Ltd, North Lincs. Tyres Ltd, Rapid Rubber Yorkshire Ltd, Robbs Tyre Services Ltd, Sandbach Tyre Service Ltd and The Tyre Brigade (GB) Ltd all became full members and CLAMPCO UK Ltd, EPYX Ltd and Smithers Rapra became supplier members.

Communication

The Executive Officers identified that only by being innovative and exciting can the NTDA maintain its position at the cutting edge of the future and maintain the strength of our industry. That is why the Association became so active on all social media platforms and again that paid dividends in raising awareness of not only the Association, but the importance of the tyre industry as a whole. The recently launched NTDA Facebook page brought together the history of the Association, by showing, for example, images of all Past Presidents and National Chairman, but also promoted and gave coverage to major NTDA events and campaigns.

Lobbying, Public Affairs and External Relationships

The Association continued to represent member’s interests with a range of Government bodies and agencies including the DVSA, DfT, Department for Business Innovation and Skills and the Environment Agency to name but a few. In November 2014, the National Chairman Roger Griggs, Immediate Past National Chairman Stephen Callow, Director Stefan Hay, Graham Willson of the BTMA and TIF attended a roundtable meeting at the House of Commons to discuss the Tyres (Buses and Coaches) Bill. Tyre safety campaigner Frances Molloy and representatives from PSV operators were also present and the meeting was chaired by Labour MP Steve Rotheram. The meeting was covered in a BBC2 documentary Inside the Commons. The NTDA and TIF representatives managed to demonstrate during the meeting that the issue was not just about tyre age, but tyre ageing, maintenance and origin. Post-election, this issue went very quiet in 2015, mainly because the Labour party, which was committed to changing the legislation as recommended in the Bill, did not get in to power. However, TIF has been working proactively on the Guide to tyre management on commercial vehicles. The guide has received support from the FTA, IRTE, RHA and the Senior Traffic Commissioner, Beverley Bell. The NTDA, TIF and the other supporting trade associations are committed to ensuring the widespread dissemination of the guide, which was launched at the Tyre Industry Conference, on an unrestricted basis. It is intended that this industry led best practice approach will negate the need for more, probably unenforceable, legislation.

The Chancellor, George Osborne’s announcement regarding the proposed consultation with a view to moving the MOT for new vehicles from year 3 to year 4 came as a total surprise, but the NTDA soon rallied and was the first association to respond and oppose the change, firstly in its own right, and subsequently as a member of the AALG.

NTDA Tyre Industry Conference, 86th Annual Dinner and Tyres

Industry Awards

The first NTDA conference for 10 years, kindly sponsored by Zenises, which saw 200 delegates enjoy a fantastic line-up of speakers, covering a huge range of topics, was heralded by attendees and the trade press as a major success for the Association.

This was then followed by the Continental Tyres sponsored record breaking 86th Annual Dinner, where more than 600 guests enjoyed a fantastic evening hosted by the Director Stefan Hay together with International Rugby Union legend Austin Healey who also presented the 2nd Tyre Industry Awards, kindly sponsored by Sailun Tyres. These events are covered more extensively throughout this directory.

NTDA Schemes

Following extensive discussions with the Roadside Emergency Action Concerning Technicians (REACT) steering group, the Licence to Fit was renamed as the Licence to Work Safely at the Roadside. At the time of writing this report, 2810 licences had been issued to technicians across the UK and it is anticipated that the 3000 mark will be reached by year end. 202 companies participated in the scheme via 27 training providers.

Another major success for the Association was its campaign to combat illegal, unsafe and dangerous part-worn tyres. The investigations carried out in partnership with Trading Standards Officers led to multiple high-profile prosecutions across the UK, suspended prison sentences and accumulated fines in excess of £50,000. Thanks to an excellent working relationship with TyreSafe, news of the prosecutions had been reported extensively. As a direct result, the NTDA Executive Council elected, unanimously at its November 2015 meeting, to reintroduce the member levy as a mandatory commitment in 2016, which will assist the Association in its continued efforts to eradicate dangerous part-worn tyres.

This report highlights just some of the main areas of activity in what has been an extremely busy and productive 85th year for the Association.
DATE & VENUE:
Thursday 6th October 2016
The VOX Conference Centre (NEC), Birmingham

EVERYONE IS WELCOME:
Building on the record attendance and huge success of last year’s NTDA Annual Dinner, Tyre Industry Awards and one day Tyre Industry Conference. The NTDA is delighted to announce that the 2016 event will be on Thursday 6th October 2016 at the brand new venue The Vox, which brings together a state of the art conference and banqueting centre, in an unparalleled location adjacent to the NEC.

The Vox is an integral part of the new £150 million Resort World complex, which also houses a designer outlet shopping centre, Genting Hotel, Genting Casino, bars, restaurants, leisure complex, multi-screen cinema and more.

Once again, this will be the most prestigious gathering of the UK Tyre Industry and one that industry professionals should not miss. Everyone is welcome, and many have already booked, so join the Association members, their guests and all the leading decision makers during the day to hear the latest on key issues affecting the tyre industry and then in the evening to celebrate our 87th Annual Dinner and the 3rd Tyre Industry Awards, which, as in previous years, will be presented by a great celebrity host.

TICKETS:
ANNUAL DINNER: Members at £105 each or £99 each for group bookings of 10 or more. Non-members at £125 each or £115 each for group bookings of 10 or more.

CONFERENCE: Members, sponsors, invited guests and Annual Dinner ticket holders: FREE OF CHARGE.
Non-members at £45 each or £40 for group bookings of 10 or more.
(All prices exc. VAT)

This event is extremely popular, spaces are limited at both the Conference and Annual Dinner and bookings operate on a first come, first served basis. To avoid disappointment book your tickets and contact us by email: alisonfitzgerald@ntda.co.uk or telephone 01296 482128.

ACCOMMODATION:
The limited number of rooms we have available at the Genting Hotel are already fully booked. We have negotiated discounts at a number of local hotels and can provide further information, but would recommend booking directly, as there are numerous hotels to suit any budget close to the vicinity and often better deals can be secured.

SPONSORSHIP:
The 2016 Tyre Industry Conference and 87th Annual Dinner are available for sponsorship. Confirmed 2016 Award sponsors include: Goodyear Dunlop, Maritime Cargo Services, Pirelli, Sailun Tyres and SingEx.
Further award and other sponsorship opportunities are available – please contact Stefan Hay for further details – email to: stefanhay@ntda.co.uk or phone 01296 482128.

NTDA Tyre Industry Award Winners 2015

REACT ROADSIDE TECHNICIAN OF THE YEAR

THE FINALISTS:

- Michael Vasey, ATS Euromaster Ltd.
- Ben Hurst, Kingsway Tyres (Stamford) Ltd.
- David Heler, Lodge Tyre Company Ltd.
- Paul Hickling, Lodge Tyre Company Ltd.
- Wayne Tizzard, Lodge Tyre Company Ltd.
- Andy Masham, Trucktyre Fleet Management Ltd.
- Chris Westbrook, Tructyre Fleet Management Ltd.
- Paul Wilkinson, Tyre Maintenance Ltd. Washington Depot

This new award attracted enthusiastic support from NTDA members. Such was the quality of the entries, highlighting the excellence, dedication and depth of quality in the tyre technician profession that the judges struggled to decide on an outright winner. As a result, two technicians Michael Vasey of ATS Euromaster and Paul Hickling of Lodge Tyre Company were awarded jointly.

Both companies expressed, extensively, how proud they were of their technicians.

Peter Tye, Group Operations Director at ATS Euromaster commented: “Michael exemplifies everything that ATS Euromaster stands for. He is a role model for tyre technicians everywhere and we are delighted that his outstanding commitment and competence has been recognised by the NTDA.”

Cliff Jones, M.D. said: “It once again reflects the hard work and investment by the team at Rema Tip Top to facilitate further product and service innovation, business development and the improvements within the business during another successful and challenging year for the industry”.

Mark Insley, CEO, added: “The challenge is there to win the award for an unprecedented three consecutive years, by serving the industry over the forthcoming year in the only way we know how – to listen, to act – to deliver!”

Receiving the award for Tyre and Aftermarket Supplier of the Year for the second consecutive year, Rema Tip Top Automotive UK representatives stated that the company was “incredibly honoured” to have secured the vote by an independent industry panel.

INDUSTRY MARKETING CAMPAIGN OF THE YEAR AWARD

THE FINALISTS:

- Bridgestone UK Ltd. ‘Only safety system that touches the road’ Campaign
- Continental Tyre Group Ltd. ‘Road to Canada’ Campaign
- Goodyear Dunlop Tyres UK and Ireland ‘Mindset’ Campaign 2015
- Goodyear Dunlop Tyres UK and Ireland ‘Promoting Safer Driving & Road Education’ Campaign
- Michelin Tyre PLC – ‘CrossClimate’ Campaign
- Pirelli Tyres Ltd. – ‘Engineered to Excite’ Campaign

Bridgestone’s emotive advertising material, and the quality and effort that went in to its award entry, truly resonated with the independent panel of judges. One stand out feature was that the company was able to successfully reaffirm the point that Bridgestone tyres are as crucial to a car’s performance, more so, than any other safety device on a vehicle.

This, together with the statistical information the company was able to present to back up the market penetration success of the campaign, put it well ahead of the nearest rival. The campaign featured a fully integrated multimedia creative which was highly visible via a wide variety of channels including TV, press, online and outdoor coverage throughout the UK.

Kwik Fit’s apprenticeship programme was awarded an ‘Outstanding’ rating from Ofsted in 2015, so for the judges, it was an obvious choice for the NTDA Staff Training and Development Initiative of the Year award.

The programme offers an excellent infrastructure that genuinely supports apprentices through their entire 2 year journey. It provides an opportunity for young people to develop the skills, attitude and knowledge required to succeed and reach their full potential.

Kwik Fit has advised the NTDA, that the apprenticeship programme has also been nominated for the Apprenticeship Programme of the Year Award at the 2016 Learning Awards. We wish Paul Binks and the Kwik Fit training team the best of luck!

TYRE WHOLESALER OF THE YEAR

THE FINALISTS:

- Bond International
- Micheldever Tyre Services
- Stapleton’s (Tyre Services) Ltd.
- Viking Wholesale

According to a representative from Stapleton’s, winning the award in 2015 was “an extra special achievement”. The company was referring to the fact that there was a new judging system, meaning that for the first year in the awards history all awards were judged by a panel of totally independent adjudicators.

Reflecting on the company’s achievement Stapleton’s M.D. Yutaka Kimbara said: “To be recognised as the number one in the industry fills me with immense pride. 2015, like many of the recent years, has been an incredibly tough marketplace to compete in. I would like to personally thank our customers, suppliers and congratulate all members of Stapleton’s staff for their continuous commitment and hard work. Without you, accolades like this are near non-achievable. We have now set the bar and must find innovative ways to ensure we do not let these standards drift. I want us to continue to improve and develop from here and be in the running for the 2016 crown. Once again thank you to everyone, a truly fantastic achievement”.

TYRE MANUFACTURER OF THE YEAR

THE FINALISTS:

- Bridgestone UK Ltd.
- Continental Tyre Group Ltd.
- Goodyear Dunlop Tyres UK and Ireland
- Hankook Tyre UK Ltd.
- Michelin Tyre PLC
- Pirelli Tyres Ltd.
- Yokohama HPT Ltd.

Bridgestone’s double victory, (having already lifted the marketing campaign trophy), at the awards was labelled a “significant breakthrough for the business.” Bridgestone’s M.D. Robin Shaw said the awards were testament to a “one team” approach, where all elements of the business were brought together to showcase a wide range of best practice achievements.

NTDA Director Stefan Hay commented: “For Bridgestone to win two of the most coveted awards not only demonstrates the exceptional quality of their entries, but also reflects what can be achieved when companies have a genuine ‘team’ ethic. The bar has definitely been set for the 2016 awards.”

Your Journey, Our Passion
Merityre Specialists Limited, Sunbury on Thames Centre said that its status as Tyre Retail Centre of the Year was reward for its hard work. The centre was commended by the judges on its high technical and customer service standards, presentation of the depot both internally and externally, employee training and development, employee loyalty, ability to display customer information on tyre labelling and safety and its positive contribution to the local community.

Centre Manager Liam Morgan, who collected the award said: “Myself and the team work very hard at Merityre Sunbury to ensure we are delivering the best possible service to our customers. It’s brilliant that we have won this award, it makes all our hard work worthwhile, and the support we receive from Pirelli as a PPC really helps us deliver on the high standards we set ourselves.”

A number of trade organisations operating in the independent automotive aftermarket meet regularly, but informally, to discuss matters of common interest. In so doing they increase the effectiveness of their activities and often find means of achieving a common end without costly duplication of effort. This group is known as the Automotive Aftermarket Liaison Group – the AALG.

Over the first 16 years of its existence, the chairmanship and secretariat of the AALG rotated between the Society of Motor Manufacturers & Traders (SMMT), the Independent Automotive Aftermarket Federation (IAAF) and the Independent Garage Association (IGA).

Our Objectives
Broader the objectives of the group are:
• Facilitate the exchange of information between associations/groups on subjects affecting their members;
• Forum for discussion with third parties whose activities affect the independent aftermarket;
• Address issues on which collaborative action on behalf of the independent aftermarket would be more successful than individual uncoordinated action by each association/group.

AALG Group Members

BRITISH BATTERY INDUSTRY FEDERATION

The British Battery Industry Federation represents the automotive and industrial battery industry in the UK. The membership includes automotive and industrial battery manufacturers, importers, distributors, agents and suppliers, and other battery related companies. It works to enhance relations between industry and government departments and agencies.

With members across the UK supplying the major percentage of the UK battery market the BBIF seeks to develop solutions of common concern in areas like legislation, environmental, renewable energy and e-mobility.

INDEPENDENT AUTOMOTIVE AFTERMARKET FEDERATION

The Independent Automotive Aftermarket Federation (IAAF) is the UK trade body representing and supporting companies in the independent automotive aftermarket.

Our members; vehicle parts manufacturers and importers, wholesale parts distributors and garages and other service outlets are not part of the networks of vehicle manufacturers and franchised dealers. Most definitely, Independent!

Our membership includes several global parts manufacturers, supplying the vehicle producers with their components used ‘on the line’, guaranteeing the supply of ‘OE’ quality parts to the independent sector. Our distributor members operate, nationally, regionally and locally. They offer huge stocks, efficient service and competitively priced products.

Together with our independent garage and service centre members, IAAF members provide the UK’s vehicle owners (private and corporate) with a competitive alternative to the franchised dealer networks.

NATIONAL TYRE DISTRIBUTORS ASSOCIATION

Founded in 1930, the NTDA is a strongly proactive trade association representing and promoting the interests of the tyre wholesale, distribution and retail sectors of the automotive aftermarket industry.

Every business sector needs strong professional representation and the NTDA fulfils this responsibility on behalf of independent tyre and fast fit retailers throughout the UK in a complex, highly competitive and ever-changing operating environment. Members range from the largest national groups with hundreds of depots, to the smallest local family run business.

The NTDA protects its members' interests through its influence with regulatory bodies, Government departments, standard setting bodies and other opinion formers that establish industry best practice both in the UK and in Europe.

It is consulted whenever new regulations or legislation are being considered and lobbies to ensure that members’ views and concerns are satisfactorily addressed and that the overall regulatory system remains practicable and affordable.

THE SCOTTISH MOTOR TRADE ASSOCIATION LTD.

The Scottish Motor Trade Association (SMTA) was formed in 1903 to "encourage, promote and protect" the interests of its small band of members. To this day that statement remains its "raison d'être" though the small band of members is now considerably larger.

We provide a wide range of services, advice and products for our members, both franchised and independent, aimed at increasing their profitability, efficiency and customer service. We also provide representation for our members at government level in Edinburgh, London and Brussels.

We provide used car warranties throughout Scotland through our subsidiary company Scotsure MBI Ltd., we own The Scottish Motor Show Ltd and have a large apprentice Training Division.

None of us are immune to life’s difficulties

If something knocks you off your feet, BEN is here to help you get back on track.

Whatever it is; whether it's you or a close family member who's going through it, dealing with it can be tough. You're not alone.

BEN offers a free confidential advice and support service - exclusively for automotive industry employees and their families. Talk to us today so you can face tomorrow mentally, financially, socially and physically fitter.
Supporting our industry people

Bob is a technician in the automotive industry. In March, he and his wife separated. Since his relationship breakdown, Bob does not feel the same person he used to be; he lacks motivation, has started drinking alcohol more regularly and experiences constantly low moods. Bob’s ex-partner is now in a new relationship which has also taken its toll. Bob was worried that his emotional well-being was affecting his ability to do his job.

We have supported Bob, encouraging him to visit his GP for depression.

In addition we have referred Bob to a funded programme of solution-based counselling sessions to help him come to terms with the breakdown of his relationship.

This support has helped Bob remain positive at work and improve his ongoing relationships with family members and his overall mental well-being.
BTMA co-operates actively with other UK tyre industry trade associations though the Tyre Industry Federation and with industry trades unions and the Health and Safety Executive though the Tyre and Rubber Industries Safety Action Group. BTMA works in close collaboration with the European Tyre and Rubber Manufacturers Association and the European Tyre and Rim Technical Organisation.

BTMA is a member of the British Standards Institution and is active in setting standards for the Industry in the UK and internationally. BTMA is also a strong supporter of TyreSafe. In co-operation with ETRMA, BTMA is active in shaping the future regulatory environment to provide a level playing field for all players. This includes not only the drafting of new Regulations but also their effective communication to the Industry. Implementation and fair enforcement complete the processes necessary to achieve the goal of creating a fair and equitable market place for all.

BTMA works in close concert with the European Tyre and Rim Technical Organisation (ETRTO) to provide authoritative guidance on the optimal use of tyres to maximise safety, performance and longevity. BTMA guidance is widely respected for being fact-based and commercially neutral.

BTMA is active in assisting its manufacturing members to deliver continuously improving performance in the field of Health, Safety and the Environment. BTMA also lobbies for fair competition between UK, European and international manufacturers.

The Imported Tyre Manufacturers’ Association

The Imported Tyre Manufacturers’ Association has represented the interests of some of Europe’s most successful tyre brands for over 40 years.

On behalf of its members, ITMA keeps a close watch on the many technical rules, regulations and other legislations which affects the tyre industry, in Europe today.

ITMA’s principal objectives are as follows:
- To provide a professional forum for the discussion of matters of common interest, both technical and commercial.
- To disseminate and collect information of mutual public interest
- To collectively organise trade and governmental contacts beneficial to its members’ businesses at EU and national levels
- To seek to promote and advance the interests of a healthy and successful Tyre industry
- To support and help develop the work of Britain’s Tyre Industry Federation

The Retread Manufacturers Association is the recognised trade body representing the interests of the retreading industry, providing a link with Government both at UK and European level. Originally formed in 1946 the Association represents the majority of independent retreaders in the UK producing retreads for use on all categories of vehicle. Suppliers of equipment and raw materials are also represented and membership is open to any company with interests in the retreading industry. Approximately 35 companies are in membership.

In addition to the important role of government liaison and co-operation with other tyre industry bodies, the RMA provides a number of key member services including training, PR and marketing services as well as operating the Green Dealer Scheme for the promotion of retreads to industry, government and the general public. The RMA is also a member of BIPAVER, the European Retread Manufacturers Association, thereby ensuring a high level of representation at European level for its UK members.

Retreading in the UK is an example of resource-efficiency within a market. It, like any other industry, has its challenges and threats but it exists and operates with the goal of minimising disposal of a reusable natural resource.

The RMA encourages best practise amongst its members in the UK tyre retreading industry, promoting energy efficient and environmental retreading and working towards streamlining the industry so that all secondary resources used are environmentally sympathetic and recyclable. To support this objective, the RMA monitors the retreading process of its members and works with government bodies and legislators to ensure that standards and environmental compliance continues to progress. The RMA additionally promotes skills development within the industry through a City and Guilds training programme which is often adopted by international retreaders seeking a recognised qualification.

About Retreading

Retreading is the process whereby carefully inspected and structurally sound worn tyre casings receive a new tread. The worn tread is buffed away and a new tread bonded to the tyre body in a process very similar to the manufacture of a new tyre. There are different processing techniques but the ultimate objective is always the same – affixing a new tread through the application of heat and pressure over time.

The retreading process follows this rough method:

- Collection of worn tyres at a retreading factory
- Inspection of casings
- Recycling of unsuitable casings into other uses – playground surfaces, sports pitches etc
- Application of new tread and reintroduction to the marketplace

A truck tyre can be retreaded two or three times if the casing remains in a good condition.

Retread tyres have a proven track record in safety, value for money and the environment. They are manufactured to high standards using highly sophisticated machinery. Since 2004 it has been a legal requirement for retreads to be manufactured according to ECE Regulations 108 (car tyres) and 109 (commercial vehicles tyres), which stipulates that tyres are tested to the same load and speed criteria as new tyres.

In terms of quality, integrity and performance, retreaded tyres are on a par with new tyres and meet the performance criteria expected from pan-European fleets. They also do so with a substantial saving in raw materials as the retread process requires 68 litres less oil than is used in the production of a new tyre.

Through its membership in BIPAVER – the European federation for the tyre retreading industry – and its participation in the EU project ReTyre, the RMA and its members demonstrate their continual dedication to promoting and upholding the environmental benefits of the retreading industry.

Challenges to the retreading circular economy

While many stakeholders and interested parties accept the environmental significance of retreaded tyres, there is a perception among certain areas that a retreaded tyre is in some way inferior to a newly manufactured equivalent. The RMA works to change this misconception by presenting the objective statistics; promoting the high standards and procedures adhered to by all RMA members; ensuring legislation and regulation acknowledges the comparable quality of retreaded tyres and incentivises their use; and by working on the ReTyre project, developing a tool to calculate tyre labels for retreaded truck tyres, comparable to the EU-approved new tyre labels.
Low-cost imports

There has been a significant increase in inexpensive new truck tyres manufactured in Asia being retailed in the UK market at prices which strongly imply uncompetitive ‘dumping’ practices. These tyres are often made with casings which are not be suitable for the retreading process. This is a significant threat to the resource-efficient nature of the tyre retreading industry and a barrier to keeping limited raw materials in use.

The circular economy process for any market must begin with the initial design and manufacture of the products that will be re-used and recycled. If the materials and the processes are not environmentally-friendly, or reusable, the circular economy will begin to fail. If tyre casings are not up to standard, fewer and fewer used tyres can be retreaded, increasing the use of limited raw materials and placing higher demands on the tyre recovery programme.

Seeking to address this issue and allow retreaded tyres to compete on an even footing in the marketplace, the Retread Manufacturers Association (RMA) met with ministers at the Department for Business to press for urgent measures to address the imminent threat already being felt across the UK and European retread industry.

The RMA presented data illustrating how imports of low cost tyres is having a devastating impact on the retread tyre industry with direct implications for employment, the tyre recovery programme and the environment.

The RMA argues that the evidence of ‘dumping’ taking place is clear by simply comparing the cost of raw material and the retail price of the Asian imports. For a truck tyre, which typically weighs 60 kilos, the materials cost approximately £1.16/kilo, giving an overall total cost of £70. Meanwhile, these tyre are retailing in the market at around £73, leaving a margin of just £3 for manufacturing, transportation, import duty and profit.

That is an impossibly low amount for a commercial operation to sustain without significant subsidies from a backing organisation or government. The RMA is calling for urgent action to allow the UK retread industry to compete fairly with the cheap and apparently subsidised imports flooding in.

At the meeting, Patrick O’Connell, Chairman RMA, reminded Government representatives that of the €1 billion the industry generates across the European Union, 60 per cent is generated by SME businesses, which are particularly vulnerable to the impact of dumping practices. Without intervention, the future of 2,500 employees across the UK’s industry is under threat.

Equally, without a successful domestic retread industry, three times more waste truck tyres will be disposed of across the UK, putting an overwhelming strain on the tyre recovery programme. Unlike other forms of tyre recycling or disposal, retreading does not simply defer the eventual disposal of the tyre but actively contributes towards reducing the amount of tyres being used and hence saves valuable natural resources.

The RMA is committed to lobbying on behalf of the retread industry to secure its long-term future in the UK and, in 2016, its primary objective is to seek a solution from the British Government and European Commission to end the uncompetitive ‘dumping’ of tyres into the UK and European markets.
The Tyre Industry Federation was established in 2005 and has developed into a valuable forum for industry debate and co-operation. TIF’s purpose is to support an operating environment that goes with the grain of responsible business. It does this through Industry improvement initiatives and by lobbying Government on issues that have impact across the sector. TIF also ensures that the tyre-related communication space is correctly informed with factually correct messages.

TIF is active in raising professionalism and compliance across our Industry. The widely acclaimed Guide to tyre management on heavy vehicles, launched at the 2015 NTDA conference, is a concrete example of tyre industry associations working with Government and other industry bodies to raise standards. Further action with Government is targeted in 2016 to ensure that the Guide reaches those operators which are furthest from the reach of normal Trade Association communications.

TIF members continue to pursue improved compliance in the used tyre sector. Persistent lobbying has been rewarded by a change of heart in Government regarding the ill-advised exemption scheme. We look forward to material progress on this issue in 2016. Progress is also being made on the thorny topic of part-worn tyres. NTDA-supported TSO enforcement actions continue to raise awareness of widespread non-compliance in this area and have brought a number of operators to book. At the same time actions launched by TRA will contribute to the removal of dangerous tyres from the part-worn market.

The Federation represents the UK tyre Industry from beginning to end of the product’s life. It provides a common platform for the British Tyre Manufacturers’ Association, the Imported Tyre Manufacturers’ Association, the National Tyre Distributors’ Association, the Retread Manufacturers Association and the Tyre Recovery Association. Each member Association contributes a number of representatives to the Board of the Federation.

The Chairman of the Federation is presently Stuart Jackson. Graham Willson, Chief Executive of BTMA, is Secretary.

TIF GUIDE DRIVES HIGHER STANDARDS AND PROFESSIONALISM

DURING HIS PRESENTATION AT THE 2015 NTDA TYRE INDUSTRY CONFERENCE, BTMA C.E.O. AND TYRE INDUSTRY FEDERATION (TIF) SECRETARY GRAHAM WILLSON TOOK THE OPPORTUNITY TO LAUNCH THE NEW TIF PUBLICATION A GUIDE TO TYRE MANAGEMENT ON HEAVY VEHICLES.

IN THE FOLLOWING ARTICLE, HE NOW EXPLAINS THE BACKGROUND AND PURPOSE TO THIS EXCELLENT, FREELY AVAILABLE, GUIDE WHICH IS ONE OF THE MANY INITI ATIVES THE FEDERATION IS PURSUING IN ORDER TO RAISE STANDARDS AND PROFESSIONALISM.

As motorists we all recognise the importance of maintaining the roadworthiness of our vehicles. For operators of heavy commercial vehicles this duty is reinforced by the requirements of the Operator licensing scheme. Compliance is overseen by the Traffic Commissioners. Amongst other actions they hold regional meetings with operators in order to address topics of common concern. The DVSA and traffic police are also represented.

The issue of responsible tyre management for both trucks and buses came to the fore in the aftermath of the A3 coach crash in 2012*. At the time excellent advice was available from number of sources. However, there was no cross-industry guidance that could be promoted by government and trade associations.
The TIF Technical Committee has worked with government and industry organisations to build a common understanding of the essentials of sound tyre management. Participants from outside the tyre industry included The Department for Transport, the Confederation for Passenger Transport, the Institute of Road Transport Engineers, the Freight Transport Association and the Road Haulage Association. The outcome is simple, concise, down to earth guidance reflecting recognised good practice.

The guide sets out what every responsible operator should do to ensure roadworthiness and to optimise operating costs. It avoids any “gold-plating” that goes beyond the minimum required standard.

Guidance only has value when it is applied. Clear drafting needs to be accompanied by widespread distribution. Making the guide available from the sponsoring organisations’ websites was an important first step. However, this doesn’t reach smaller unaffiliated operators where competence can be most variable. The next phase in the project, to be implemented in 2016, is to work with government to deliver the guidance in a targeted manner to this particular population.

Knowledge of what good practice requires is only of value if it is accompanied by appropriate skills. Publication of the guide coincides with the launch by NTDA of initiatives pursuing increased professionalism through training, qualification and certification. Taken together, these different actions illustrate how the Tyre Industry Federation is building a better, safer and more professional industry.

The guide to tyre management on heavy commercial vehicles is available free to download from the TIF website – www.tyreindustryfederation.co.uk.

* In 2012 three people returning from the Bestival music festival died after a coach tyre that was 19 and a half years old blew out.

The 52-seat coach crashed as it headed north on the A3 in Surrey, travelling to Merseyside from the festival on the Isle of Wight last September.

Driver Colin Daubly, 63, and passengers Kerry Ogden, 23, and Michael Molloy, 18, were all killed and several other passengers seriously injured.
The Tyre Recovery Association

Our Mission:
To provide an externally audited, legally compliant tyre collection and recovery service which offers security, protection and peace of mind for all those who generate waste tyres across the United Kingdom.

A cornerstone of the TRA is its Responsible Recycler Scheme which is endorsed by the Tyre Industry Federation and all its constituent members. All TRA members are fully accredited by the Scheme, which guarantees that all tyres collected, recycled or reprocessed by them are disposed of or reused in an environmentally friendly and legally compliant manner.

Scheme members are subject to regular spot audits and are subject to the Scheme Charter. Used tyres collected, handled or reprocessed by scheme members are tracked throughout the disposal chain so delivering full traceability and accountability.

Assurance of ‘best practice’ at every stage in the process.

MORE THAN A TYRE

BANDVULC GROUP
BANDVULC.com
A Message from The Tyre Recovery Association

IN THE FOLLOWING ARTICLE PETER TAYLOR OBE, SECRETARY GENERAL OF THE TYRE RECOVERY ASSOCIATION PROVIDES AN OVERVIEW OF THE ONGOING PROBLEM OF USED TYRE RECOVERY.

Used tyre recovery raises some difficult issues as well as challenges for the tyre industry, and not just in Britain.

As most tyre people know, we in Europe are all governed by the EU Landfill Directive which since 2006 has prohibited the landfilling of tyres other than for engineering purposes. Our record in Britain has been quite a good one, but it must be obvious to many that the aspirations set out in the Directive are not being fully met.

Ideally, waste materials of any kind are set out in what has become known as the ‘waste hierarchy’. This sets out a hierarchy of preferences for the way we handle our end of life materials.

The Waste Hierarchy

In the case of tyres ‘disposal is no longer an option here in the UK or the rest of Europe.

Reducing waste is the most favoured option and for quite obvious reasons. Fewer tyre arisings means less disposal. Here, the UK is acting commendably to better educate the motorist about the importance of correct air pressure in tyres and safer driving. Modern tyres also tend to last longer.

Reuse is more controversial in the tyre context especially the vexed question of often illegal part-worns. However, this is something the tyre industry has collectively decided to act against and the TRA itself has launched a protocol aimed at preventing dangerous and unsuitable tyres re-entering the market. We must now encourage others to follow this lead.

Recycling is where the biggest opportunities lie. Remember, re-treading is also part of recycling and we must do all we can to defend the interests of the re-treading sector. Beyond re-treading there is a vast array uses for end of life tyres in the form of crumb, granulate and powders and the tyre industry has worked extensively with WRAP, BSI and others to agree proper and consistent standards for these materials under the PAS107 banner. One problem here has been that under present rules tyre-derived materials remain ‘waste’ until re-incorporated into some other product. This has been a big regulatory handicap for recyclers on a number of fronts and one the TRA has long tried to tackle.

In 2015 this work paid off and we were given permission by Defra and the EA to launch an audited ‘Quality Protocol’ which when followed, confers ‘new product’ status on tyre-derived materials with all the advantages this brings.

Finding new volume uses for tyre-derived material is one of our greatest challenges. While we are well aware of the opportunities the development of new products in this sector is often hindered by adverse market economics. Recycling always comes at a cost and too often cheaper and far less efficient forms of disposal, sometimes encouraged by rogue activity undermine the gate price needed to support these opportunities.

Some things we can and do use old tyres for:
- Construction bales
- Carbon Products
- Drainage, backfill
- Gaskets, hoses, rings, seals
- Landfill engineering
- Rail Sleepers
- Riverbank reinforcement
- Expansion joints
- Stabilisation
- Equestrian arenas
- Sound barriers
- Moulded/ extruded parts
- Sheet materials & roofing
- Tyre Derived Fuel (TDF)
- Retreading (cement and lime kilns / electric arc furnaces)
- Sports/play surfaces
- Flooring materials
- Carpet underlay
- Rubber modified bitumen for road surfaces

Energy Recovery remains one of our most important recovery routes both in the UK and overseas. However, there are strong indications that we and other European countries are becoming dependent on the export of tyre waste for fuel often to countries... which do not even begin to meet the same emissions standards as required here in Europe. This is not only unacceptable but in unlikely to be allowed to continue in the longer term.

This then brings us to another crossroads in the overall recycling story, something we refer to as the ‘Proximity Principle’. Put succinctly, this simply means that waste is best with as close to home as possible, not shipped half-way around the world. It makes both environmental and economic sense when viewed objectively but somehow the economics of end of life tyre disposal have become distorted by a number of factors not least of which is low market entry barriers, easy returns associated with rouge collections. Throughout the UK the authorities are more than aware of this and as an industry it is absolutely in our interests to join with them cleaning up bad practice at the margins of our business. In the future our reputations may depend on it. Nevertheless, we have made great progress specially with our still wholly voluntary Responsible Recycler Scheme launched some fifteen years ago and covering an impressive 75% + of all of our countries waste tyres. It is efficient, highly cost effective when compared to most other more regulated European markets and respected by Government. It deserves the unqualified support of all in our industry who care for their reputations.

Established in 2006, TyreSafe is the UK’s leading tyre safety organisation, dedicated to raising awareness about the dangers associated with illegal and defective tyres.

Since its inception, TyreSafe’s activities have helped reduce the number of people killed or seriously injured in a tyre related accident in the UK by 30%.

Campaigning in line with current legislation, TyreSafe leads the agenda on a wide range of tyre care and maintenance issues educating drivers, businesses, road safety professionals and other relevant stakeholders and user groups.

As well as its ongoing activities, TyreSafe runs several themed campaigns every year to support its members and address specific tyre safety challenges. The group also organises the annual tyre safety month campaign which runs nationwide every October.

For more information about TyreSafe visit www.tyresafe.org or contact Christine Joyce on 01787 226995.

Members of TyreSafe
2015 was a landmark year for TyreSafe. The momentum built over the previous eight years gathered pace with broader reach, engagement and participation than ever before. As it approaches its tenth anniversary year in 2016, TyreSafe is the strongest it has ever been.

However, figures from the Department for Transport (DfT) on casualties and Drivers and Vehicle Standards Agency (DVSA) on MoT failures, illustrate there is no room for complacency and more work needs to be done. In 2014, the DfT reported 1125 casualties resulting from accidents caused by illegal, defective or under-inflated tyres with 224 of those resulting in death or serious injury. These numbers represent a 31% reduction in casualties arising from road accidents caused by tyre defects since TyreSafe’s inaugural year, 2006.

With the number of MoTs failed as a result of defective tyres static at around 2.2m annually and TyreSafe’s tread depth survey revealing potentially 10 million illegal tyres on Britain’s roads in 2015, there is a clear need for further driver education to deliver behavioural change.

Championing tyre safety

TyreSafe campaigns in line with existing legislation on the dangers of defective and illegal tyres to address Britain’s motorists using a diverse portfolio of activities and initiatives.

A core activity is leveraging media reach to raise awareness. In 2015, TyreSafe distributed over 30 press releases, achieving over 1200 pieces of coverage in print, online and broadcast. These included features on BBC’s Fake Britain and ITV Central’s news programme, along with national and regional newspapers, magazines and trade publications.

Online, TyreSafe’s social media channels grew exponentially with Facebook reach up by over 600% and the number of Twitter followers increasing by 25% in 2015.

However, TyreSafe also acts as a facilitator for its supporters’ campaigns by providing an extensive library of print and online materials as well as animations and videos. These are used online, at events and displayed in outlets.

Tyre Safety Month

Running throughout October, Tyre Safety Month is the focal point of TyreSafe’s campaign calendar, providing a platform to educate road users on the importance of correct tyre care and maintenance.

For 2015, TyreSafe offered members and supporters the opportunity to leverage a campaign with a more riské slogan to broaden the tyre safety reach into new audiences. Supported by more conservative yet impactful materials, the campaign drew on the robust findings of TyreSafe research into attitudes towards tyre safety and consumer behaviour.

When Did You Last Do It? proved extremely popular with members and supporters alike with a broad range of print and online materials generated. The results speak for themselves, smashing last year’s record number of materials ordered by 50% to over 750,000. These were utilised by over 300 organisations including the use of the ‘Pam and Dick’ postcard by one of our supporting police services.

Digital resources for online use included the campaign animation, web banners and infographic.

TyreSafe’s team also supported on-ground activities at Asda’s headquarters; presented at a national police conference on van safety; exhibited and presented at the National Tyre Dealers Association conference; and presented the Central Motorway Police Group (the largest in Britain) with tread depth gauges.

Partner and member activities were equally diverse. Many partners supported the tyre safety awareness drive with education and interventions such as vehicle inspections in car parks, advertising, direct mail campaigns and social media activity.

Highlights of media coverage through Tyre Safety Month

TyreSafe included a demonstration of winter tyres on ITV Central.

Tread depth survey

Highways England Officers reported over 60,000 incidents between April 2013 and October 2014 that involved tyre/wheel issues. As a prelude to potential future intervention, further data/intelligence was required that could apply to the whole road network. Highways England identified TyreSafe as best placed to support an exercise to deliver this initial intelligence, which would be capable of guiding a tyre safety project.

The results identified that more than a quarter of all drivers had an illegal tyre on their vehicle, at the time they were replaced, suggesting that nearly 10 million tyres on the roads of England, Scotland and Wales could be dangerous and illegal in 2015. That figure equates to potentially up to one in every four cars and LCVs of the 35.3 million vehicles on Britain’s roads having an illegal tyre at some time during the year.

Having produced startling results from the first phase, TyreSafe is conducting an even larger and more comprehensive second round of its survey of tyres at the point of replacement, building on the existing substantial sample to offer greater insight into the condition of the nation’s tyres. Data collation will begin on 1st October 2015 and the results will provide intelligence-led information to inform future tyre safety policy. Those wishing to participate are requested to contact theteam@tyresafe.org (or call 01787 221027). More information on the first phase of the TyreSafe tread depth survey can be found at www.tyresafe.org
Part worn tyres

The sale of illegal and unsafe part worn tyres by unscrupulous dealers continues to risk the safety of millions of Britain’s motorists. It’s estimated that more than three million part worn tyres were sold in 2015.

TyreSafe has continued its work with the NTDA and Trading Standards offices around the country to provide the expertise they require to prosecute part worn dealers selling dangerous tyres to unsuspecting motorists. The result of an investigation with Brent ad Harrow Trading Standards resulted in the prosecution of eight retailers in North London alone.

The dangers of buying part worn was highlighted in season six, episode seven of BBC’s Fake Britain with the support of TyreSafe. Two extensive features in the programme featured the experience of mother of four who was supplied with a c set of four illegal and dangerous part worns for her family car. The episode also looked behind the scenes at a Trading Standards investigation and featured TyreSafe team member interviews.

TyreSafe’s campaign to raise awareness of the risks of buying part worns will continue in 2016. Recently, TyreSafe launched a website to target potential buyers as they are actively looking to buy part worn tyres – www.partworn-tyres.co.uk Members and partners are encouraged to contact theteam@tyresafe.org if they would like to support the campaign.

2016 – TyreSafe’s 10th anniversary year

While 2015 set a new benchmark for TyreSafe’s success, 2016 will see the organisation take even greater strides forward. In the first quarter of 2016, the not-for-profit organisation is scheduled to achieve charity status, a long-anticipated milestone which will reinforce its non-commercial objectives and credibility.

Also in early 2016, the www.tyresafe.org website will be relaunched following a complete redesign to ensure easy and rewarding access to tyre safety information for the consumer and our supporters. For stakeholders, a driving event will be held illustrating the difference in performance between tyres in good condition and those with low tread depth and air pressure. The annual Tyre Safety Month Briefing will again be held in July with the 2016 TyreSafe Awards ceremony following on in the evening. The TyreSafe Awards 2016 will once again recognise the efforts and contribution of members and supporters.

TyreSafe’s ongoing engagement with numerous organisations and agencies directly affecting national road safety policy is also anticipated to develop in the coming year. The second phase of the survey of tread depth at the point of replacement will act as key intelligence in informing those activities.

Tyre Safety Month will once again act as the focus of our year in October but, of course, resources will be developed to target specific groups of motorists throughout. Through activities such as these TyreSafe will continue to educate Britain’s motorists and seek behavioural change in tyre care and maintenance.
Tyre Wholesalers Group
Chairman’s View

2015 HAS BEEN TOUGH, THOUGHT-PROVOKING AND IN SOME INSTANCES, QUITE GOOD, LOOKING AT IT FROM THE TYRE WHOLESALER’S AND NTDA PERSPECTIVE.

Market:
It is anticipated that the replacement market for consumer tyres results in 2015, may be slightly above 2014 figures; somewhere in the region of up to 35m units. This depends, obviously, on whether the remaining part of the year continues on the trend experienced so far, which if it does will be good news. However, figures are always subjective, to a degree, because at any one time it’s hard to establish the exact proportion of tyres fitted to wheels as opposed to those currently being stocked within the wholesaler and distributor network, though it’s always hoped that it will even itself out.

The replacement truck market has, again, seen growth this year with current estimates of anything up to, or exceeding, 1.4m units. Very good news for those players involved with new truck tyres, but where there is ‘Gain’, there also can be ‘Pain’. That pain, I’m sure, can be felt by the Re-tread / Re-mould producers who have seen their market share reduce, due to the influx of favourably priced Chinese produced brands and, in particular, those of suggested higher quality and reliability. This is a trend I don’t see changing anytime soon.

The agricultural market, especially OE, would seem to be down between 20 > 25%, though this is not replicated on the replacement market, as it has remained reasonably steady and in line, or just above, 2014 figures so not too disastrous. However, has the downturn on OE demand been the stimulus for the main manufacturers to offer ‘End User’ incentives to bolster up their figures by becoming much more competitive, or for other reasons? I’m sure all will be revealed in the fullness of time.

Part Worn Tyres:
At this time, I will briefly bring up the subject of part-worn tyres, a topic close to many I’m sure, and which to the majority could be construed as a blight on the industry. I say briefly, due to the subject being eloquently covered by the NTDA National Chairman during his speech at the recent 86th Annual Dinner in October. Nevertheless, it is worth reiterating that due to the voluntary levy by NTDA members to fund joint investigations with Trading Standards Officers, 2015 has been a very successful year for ‘Justice’ to prevail, with a number of rogue companies, thanks to ‘High Profile Operations’, being prosecuted, heavily fined and now at long last either complying with legislation, or ceasing to trade altogether! Very good news indeed.

However much more can, and will, be done during 2016 and since it is obvious that Government funding won’t be forthcoming, (irrespective of the fact that we know it would be self-financing and heaven forbid SAVE LIVES), I call on the NTDA’s tyre manufacturer partners, many of which are NTDA supplier members too, to help the full members finance this on-going and vital programme. To eradicate the sale and fitment of dangerous part-worn tyres isn’t just of interest to those directly involved in the tyre industry, it’s in the interest, and to the benefit of, every single person who either uses our roads, or walks by our roads and doing our bit to protect the innocent, is surely a very just cause indeed.

Tyre Wholesalers and the Marketplace
We have again seen extraordinary levels of price reductions during 2015 and if you take into consideration the reductions during 2014, we are reaching levels of 40% > 45% over a 24 month period on Dollar based Chinese consumer and truck products. Incredible and I don’t mean this in the positive sense! When you then take into consideration the tyre distributor / service provider’s expectation levels of increased frequency of deliveries and support combined with these reduced prices, you have a business model that is becoming unsustainable into the future especially for some tyre wholesalers. Fortunately, the TWG has a wide variety of forward thinking, proactive, tyre wholesalers within the Association and this wide variety employs many differing business models to achieve their route to market objectives. This makes for a very healthy association as the ‘One Model Fits All’ principle doesn’t apply, and nor should it do, as ‘choice’ for the distributor is important and, dare I say, a necessity. It has been mentioned in the trade press that the ‘rise and rise’ of e-commerce, and the embracing of web based purchasing by the ‘End User’, could signal the demise of the traditional tyre wholesaler whose ‘principal’ route to market is the partnership between them and the tyre distributor/service provider. In fact, to continue this strategy, would be tantamount to acknowledging the famous saying by Frazer from Dad’s Army “We’re Doomed”. Are they doomed? Of course not, however, understanding and embracing the tasks presented are key to successfully navigating our ever changing market place.

Do I believe there are great challenges ahead for the TWG membership? Of course I do, for a number of reasons, but none more so than the relentless obtainability of cheaply priced product from Asia as already mentioned. This vast product availability to Europe has not only been caused by the ‘manufacture without consequence’ concept currently employed, but further compounded by anti-dumping tariffs, Middle East unrest, flat markets in Russia and not forgetting, the current economic situation in China itself. These factors have resulted in the proliferation of Chinese ‘Agents’ bombardment the UK with never ending offers that seem ‘too good to be true’, and, on numerous occasion, they are. Agents can offer products totally unsuitable for UK consumption either from a legislative point of view or even in some instances age, as product can at times be up to, and over, 3 years old. So a note of caution to the unwary! Nevertheless, there are safe options for those distributors wishing to follow this specific route; the tyre wholesalers. It has also been highlighted in the trade press that due to the reasons I’ve already covered, the traditional tyre wholesaler’s future role may evolve into becoming more like a ‘specialist freight forwarder’. Taking this as an example then, is this not the best and safest route for the distributor to take, as the wholesaler has already ensured the products they offer from their ‘key manufacturer partners’, meet the required legislative standards required for UK Market re-sale – I would hope so, as it would be a small price to pay for peace of mind this would bring.

We are experiencing an ever evolving market place as can be seen with the recent announcement by Trelleborg Wheel Systems of their acquisition of CGS Holdings and during 2016 I expect we will see more. Whether this be by acquisition, amalgamation or diversification, but mostly, I hope we will see consolidation from a manufacturing perspective, as we have to reduce the massive global over capacity scenario we currently experience.

Nevertheless, even taking all these factors into consideration, I believe the members within the TWG are best placed to rise and face these challenges head on, whatever the future may hold, by continuing to operate ‘Best Practice’ procedures and ensuring ‘Due Diligence’ on all the products and services they offer the UK Market Place.

NTDA

The TWG is an integral part of the NTDA and 2015 has been, in my opinion, another great year for the Association, which I believe can be summed up as follows:

• We had the inaugural Tyre Industry Conference which was absolutely superb with an array of expert guest speakers covering wide ranging topics that affect our industry today, but more importantly tomorrow. I came away from the Conference having gained an insight into areas I never could have imagined and found the whole experience eye opening, thought provoking and most of all inspiring, so you really can’t get better than that.

• The Annual Dinner that followed was again over-subscribed even though the venue itself was able to hold more than at any previous events. It was another fantastic night, slickly and dynamically run, as we have now come to expect from the Director Stefan Hay and his team, with a party atmosphere that was enjoyed by all that I spoke to. I’m sure 2016 will be ever better and just to ensure no one is left out and disappointed, a new venue has been chosen that can cater for the increased numbers expected at this prestigious event.

• As mentioned earlier, we have the continual fight against non-compliant part-worn tyre suppliers selling dangerous tyres resulting in more successful prosecutions, fines and business closures this year.

• The availability and continual updating through the official web site, social media channels and events of a vast range of information, guidance and help covering all aspects of our industry to a level that is really unprecedented and this not surprisingly will continually improve.

I could go on listing the many achievements of the NTDA during 2015, but they are also covered in the official Annual Report and are vast to say the least. I am certain that 2016 will bring many, many more.

Finally, I would like to thank all of you who attended the TWG Annual Lunch in November, especially as time is a major consideration for everyone. I’ve sung the praises of how the NTDA, as a whole, has positively evolved these last two years and with that, the TWG Annual Luncheon will evolve also. We will no longer have a stand-alone Luncheon in November. The next AGM and Annual Lunch will take place on Wednesday 5th October 2016 which precedes the NTDA Tyre Industry Conference and Annual Dinner on Thursday 6th which hopefully, will be good news for everyone and assist with busy diaries and schedules.

I wish you all a successful and prosperous 2016 and look forward to catching up with you throughout the year.

IN THE FOLLOWING ARTICLE, THE DVSA EXPLAINS ITS WORK TO MODERNISE THE MOT AND THE LONG-TERM BENEFITS OF THIS ONGOING PROJECT.

The Driver and Vehicle Standards Agency (DVSA) is the executive agency sponsored by the Department for Transport (DfT) responsible for helping to improve road safety. DVSA is responsible for setting and enforcing the standards for MOT tests as well as supporting the garages and testers which carry them out.

The agency is currently in the process of modernising the MOT service and the processes and policies which support the overall aim of making sure vehicles are safe to go out on the road.

The focus since 2014 has been the implementation of a modernised IT solution to replace the old MOT Comp system which testers used to enter test results and DVSA used to enforce the rules and regulations.

As a result, the replacement MOT testing service was launched in 2015 to provide the platform through which the agency’s future MOT improvements will be delivered.

WHY IS MODERNISING THE MOT IMPORTANT?

MOT testing provides a core part of Great Britain’s long-standing regulatory approach towards making sure the nation’s vehicles and roads are safe to use.

Great Britain is one of the pioneers of this approach of providing a periodic inspection focused on improving road safety and it’s something which we – as a nation – should be proud of.

The very fact that the term ‘MOT’ has become an internationally-recognised brand to describe the inspection of vehicles says a lot about the high standing of our MOT testing process across the globe.

However, within recent years it became increasingly evident that the MOT was not keeping up with the pace of the modern world in terms of technology and the service it provided.

This initially led to the agency’s decision in 2013 to update the IT solution on which the MOT was based and build the ‘MOT testing service’ to replace the old and outdated ‘MOT comp system’.

This web-based replacement was built in line with the widespread business and governmental practice of bringing services online and the cost advantages and convenience this brings to everyone involved.

Over the same period, DVSA has also been overhauling its overall MOT strategy and the policies, rules and regulations which support it.

HOW IS THE MOT BEING MODERNISED?

The introduction of these IT and business improvements mean DVSA is now on the road to achieving its goal of providing an up-to-date framework within which a modernised MOT can thrive.

This means the agency is empowering garages, testers and the associated MOT industry to use the best technology and practices to deliver:

- high MOT test quality as the default
- a competitive, profitable and ‘professionalised’ MOT industry
- a MOT service which consumers have confidence in
- improved public safety and value for money
- a MOT service where corruption and fraud is driven out

Since the decision was taken to modernise the MOT, DVSA has been working with the industry to make sure it has a clear ‘vision’ of where the MOT needs to develop.

The agency has consulted with every level of the MOT trade (from large multi-site operations through to sole traders) to make sure user need is at the heart of this development process.

This is because DVSA wants to create a framework within which the modernised MOT can thrive and create an overall service which is fit-for-purpose and provides value for money for the MOT industry and the public purse.

WHAT’S COMING UP IN 2016 AND BEYOND

The wider work to modernise the MOT service has already started with changes being planned beyond those improvements we’ve already seen.

For example, work to alter the approach to MOT training is already underway with the existing training model set to undergo a series of fundamental changes during the course of 2016.

This will include the former 5-yearly refresher training cycle being replaced by a requirement for testers to undertake training each year under a continuing professional development (CPD) model.

This will provide the opportunity to focus training on best meeting each tester’s needs as well delivering it in a way which better suits individuals and their employers.

Once this is in place, the approach to ‘new entrant’ tester and manager training will change involving a move towards this being provided as a qualification by educative bodies.

This is a big step towards improving the professional status of the MOT industry and those who work within it.

Over the same period of time, DVSA will improve other areas of the MOT which will be reflected in an updated approach to and version of the ‘MOT testing guide’ to reflect the modernised MOT service.

The ‘MOT testing guide’ is the document which sets out the rules by which the MOT service is operated and DVSA is also looking to create a better version of the document which will help and support businesses to do things in the right way.

This means the agency will be looking at both the guide’s design and overall wording with the updated version developed directly in line with user needs and requirements.

This should result in a document which can be more easily and readily accessed and understood by the MOT industry and the wider public.

Historically DVSA has also been very prescriptive in how MOT management processes are carried out and how the related policies are interpreted and enforced.

For example, ‘Quality Control (QC) checks’ are an important part of the work which garages carry out to make sure test quality is maintained across the MOT industry.

However, as part of DVSA’s overall modernisation project of how the whole service works, it’s currently reconsidering how these checks are delivered and looking into how they could become part of a broader quality management system.

Such a system would need to consider all the other things a garage needs to do to support quality testing so needs to be flexible enough to meet each individual garage’s needs and requirements.

There will be numerous other areas which will be reviewed in a similar way over the coming weeks, months and years with DVSA looking to understand the options for improving things like:

• innovation in equipment and technology
• assurance that the right vehicle is tested to the right standard
• improving authorisation processes such as online applications

All the above is not something which is achieved overnight and there’s a long road ahead in terms of where the MOT is and might be heading.

The launch of the ‘MOT testing service’ was just the start of modernising the MOT. There’s a lot more work to be done before DVSA and the MOT industry starts to see the kind of step changes in quality they’re seeking.

However, DVSA is committed to the idea that this is a journey which needs to be taken and is one best carried out with the direct input of the businesses, garages and testers involved.
The National Measurement and Regulation Office (NMRO) is responsible for enforcing the EU Tyre Labelling Regulations and is part of the Department of Business, Innovation and Skills (BIS). As such, NMRO's stated aim is to “simplify technical legislation for the benefit of British business”. Regulation is necessary to provide a level playing field for business and it is the focus of NMRO to use appropriate measures to ensure that regulation is designed in a way that supports business compliance and growth.

NAME CHANGE, SAME SERVICE:

In April 2015 the National Measurement Office became the National Measurement and Regulation Office. The name change was part of a move within BIS to come under the sponsorship of the Better Regulation Delivery Office (BRDO). This change has not affected the scope of NMRO’s enforcement work but has meant a further alignment with the Regulators’ Code, which in turn means an increased transparency of the procedures used in projects and investigations. NMRO continues to work with businesses to achieve compliance through building collaborative relationships as part of our mixed model approach to Enforcement.

RETAILER COMPLIANCE

This year our focus has been on raising awareness among small and medium tyre retailers, particularly with regards their obligations at the point of sale. From our point of view this has served to build our understanding of the very different pressures and resources in this sector. Our awareness visits around the UK were conducted in tandem with a project aimed at providing these businesses with a website and guidance in order to assist compliance.

Tyre retailers were consulted during the awareness visits to ascertain their understanding of their obligations as well as establish what type of resources could support their compliance with the EU Tyre Labelling Regulation. The results were interesting:

- Less than 50% of retailers were aware of their responsibilities.
- Less than 50% of retailers provided label information over the telephone.
- Half of retailers provide the label ratings on their invoices to customers.
- None of the retailers were aware of the role of NMRO or had visited NMRO website.
- All of the retailers believed that guidance from NMRO would be useful to aid compliance.

These results very much echo previous projects’ findings with regards low levels of compliance at the point of sale. It was clear that there is a need to reinforce the message of the legislation, which is to ensure that the consumer is able to make an informed decision when it comes to buying tyres. There is an acknowledgement of the pressures on tyre retailers when it comes to how much time can be spent on the phone, particularly with smaller businesses where both time and training resources can be limited.
NMRO TYRE LABELLING RESOURCES

Having listened to the industry's concerns NMRO produced a communications strategy, starting by collaborating with the NTDA in order to reach as many retailers as possible. A new page on NMRO website was created and populated with a variety of media to assist tyre retailers, which can be viewed online or printed off:

AN INTRODUCTION TO NMRO

A guide to best practice when selling tyres
A guide to selling tyres over the telephone
The TIF/NMO guide published when the legislation came into force
Tyresafe material, including a poster and a video.

All of the above resources provide retailers with guidance on complying with the legislation and can be found on NMRO website: www.gov.uk/government/publications/nmro-communication-resource-for-tyre-labelling-awareness, or by typing the words “NMRO Tyre Labelling Resources” into your search engine.

FUTURE WORK

Awareness visits throughout the year serve to raise NMRO’s profile in the industry and provided the opportunity for NMRO to listen to industry concerns regarding the label, contributing to our risk matrix which can direct future enforcement operations. Over our time working with the EU Tyre Label so far it is clear that the obligation of the retailer to label the tyre is one that is rarely broken, which means that we can direct our resources to the higher risk areas of the industry including, but not exclusively: compliance at the point of sale, confidence in the label and tackling public awareness of the label.

As the label moves into its fourth year of being in force in Europe and with a Commission review being undertaken at the time of writing, the exact methods for approaching these high risk areas of the industry have yet to be determined. However the landscape may change NMRO will continue to provide proactive industry support in order to achieve the legislative and policy objectives, supporting UK businesses and aiming to minimise legislative burden.

More information on NMRO’s activities can be accessed via: https://www.gov.uk/government/collections/national-measurement-office-enforcement-authority or by emailing tyres@nmro.gov.uk
A 36-year veteran of automotive trade publishing, Greg Smith has held various publishing positions at the management level. He has worked extensively on both the editorial and publishing sides of the business and is a recognized expert in the aftermarket and tire industries. From his early years in the market, Greg has been active participating on industry committees and boards. Among the early ones were APAA and ASIA, and has since participated in AWDA, SEMA, NTDRA, TIA and TANA.

Currently as publisher of Modern Tire Dealer, Greg is responsible for the brand’s business operations. In the following article he provides an overview of the current state of the tyre market in the US

The tire industry is truly global, with many similarities from continent to continent. Yet at the same time, there are many subtle differences that make following the industry so fascinating.

When Stefan Hay asked me to make a few comments about events that are taking place in the U.S. and if they might relate to the European market, I thought this would be a very easy task. After all, Bridgestone, Michelin and Goodyear battle each other throughout the world for the number one spot and usually set the tone for the rest of the industry.

And, no matter where tires are sold, there are various government regulations regarding performance standards, labeling and tracking of the tires. Plus, we all know that manufacturers produce the tires and then the distribution channel takes over and sells them. It’s a nice, clearly defined flow-chart. Right?

Well, not so fast.

The first thing I should explain about the U.S. market is that it is as highly diverse as our population. Strategies and opportunities that exist in California are completely different from those taking place in South Dakota, Minnesota and all of our New England states. We are not a “one-size-fits-all” country when it comes to selling tires.

It is one of the reasons why I always recommend that any tire company which is bringing an overseas executive to the U.S. to work should have the executive spend at least two weeks traveling by car around the perimeter of the country. It’s only then that our cultural differences will make sense.

With this as background, there are a few events that have taken place in 2015 that are worth reviewing.

Probably the most significant event in the industry has been the foray by Goodyear into a direct online selling program. Here’s why.
And finally, since tires are just part of the overall purchase (you simply cannot discount the service aspect of a tire sale), will the whole online sales category remain a small portion of the industry, and, be, as William Shakespeare once wrote, “Much Ado About Nothing”? Only time will tell.

The long battle over countervailing duties and tariffs on Chinese-produced consumer tires finally ended in mid-2015, along with all of the questions surrounding pricing, shipments and long-term strategies of these products. To recap, the U.S. government levied total duties and tariffs ranging from 35% up to well over 100% on the tires, depending on the company that produced them.

In anticipation of big price increases, many distributors and wholesalers stockpiled tires during late 2014, making 2014 tire shipments look healthier than they actually were. (Ironically, the tariffs were retroactive.) However, two significant consequences took place. First, knowing that tires produced in China were “undoubtedly” going to see duties and tariffs placed upon them, companies moved molds to other countries and began construction of plants outside of China.

Secondly, the price increases that everyone was predicting for Chinese produced consumer tires didn’t take place, at least at the levels experts thought would happen. Why? Raw material decreases, currency fluctuation, and perhaps help by the Chinese government to keep its factories running were all part of the theories. Cutting straight to the bottom line, the U.S. is still seeing Chinese-produced consumer tires coming into the country at the low end of the market.

It’s true that some Chinese manufacturers decided to quit sending tires to the U.S., and they diverted those tires to other parts of the world. It’s also true that some of the Chinese tire makers are going to build plants in North America.

During 2015, consumer miles driven increased in the U.S., due partly by lower gasoline and diesel fuel prices from previous years. In normal times, this would easily lead to a big increase in tires sales and shipments. But that didn’t happen in 2015. The stockpiling of Chinese consumer tires in 2014 placed a logjam in the pipeline for 2015.

The fourth quarter of 2015 also saw a lack of snow and cold weather in parts of the country where winter tires are sold. This has led to consumers holding back on purchasing new tires. It’s a strange phenomenon, but if snow doesn’t hit in October or early November, consumers believe that they can make it through the winter on marginal tires, even though winter truly runs from late December through April in those areas.

Americans, well, actually American lawyers and politicians, love “recalls.” The rest of us would also love recalls if we were recalling our politicians, but that’s humor that might not translate to the rest of the world.

The reason I bring up recalls is that in a recently passed Transportation Bill by Congress and signed by President Obama, the U.S. once again has mandatory tire registration. The stated purpose for having tire registration in the first place is that the tires can be located and replaced should there be a recall. Well, we probably will get mandatory registration at some point, but a number of details must happen first, and this could take time.

Up until 1982, mandatory registration of tires was a federal mandate. The National Tire Dealers and Retreaders Association (NTDRA), forerunner of today’s Tire Industry Association (TIA) effectively argued that if we eliminated mandatory tire registration and made it voluntary, more tires would be registered.

Whether this happened or not is anyone’s guess because people on both sides of the issue use different statistics and numbers. Nevertheless, late in 2014 at a governmental hearing, the Rubber Manufacturers Association (RMA) stated that it felt the U.S. should return to a mandatory registration of tires. This immediately placed the two major associations for the industry on opposite sides of the issue, since TIA wanted to continue voluntary registration.

TIA believes that mandatory legislation would place too much of the burden and expense of the program on the backs of the retailers, and would open the door for manufacturers to gain user names and data for sales and marketing purposes. The RMA argued that mandatory registration would allow its members to find and replace more tires in the case of recalls.

Bottom line, at some point we’ll begin mandatory tire registration again in the U.S. It would just seem to me that a well-placed computer chip embedded in a tire would handle registration and tire labeling all in a nice package.

A final thought about the U.S. and how things are similar to other countries. The big distributors and retailers continue to become larger and more powerful. This also means we’re seen acquisitions of each other along with private equity money entering the market. Even as I write this, Carl Icahn and Bridgestone are bidding against each other to buy Pep Boys, an auto parts and tires retailer with around 800 locations in 35 states. When all is said and done, the deal will be in the $850 million to $1 billion range.

Some things never change.
Nowadays, thanks to European policies and national best practices, only a small percentage of waste tyres are being landfilled. In fact, tyre rubber is a highly-engineered material representing a century of manufacturing innovation and the same characteristics that makes it a problem as waste, makes it one of the most re-used materials within our built environment. Recycled tyre rubber (RTR) is being used in new tyres, tyre-derived fuel, moulded rubber products, for agricultural uses and recreational and sports applications. These are all famous applications and I am convinced that you are aware of most of them, what you may not be aware of, is that RTR is used with great success in civil engineering as material for road pavements, more specifically in the form of ‘rubberised asphalt mixture’. The benefits of using rubberised asphalts are being more widely experienced and recognized and the incorporation of tyres into asphalt is likely to increase in extent and the variety of technologies. However, rubberised asphalt technologies are still struggling to be fully adopted worldwide, mainly because of poor information and a lack of training of relevant personnel and stakeholders and also insufficient support of local policies. This article has the ambition of shedding some light on the benefits and limitations of extensively adopting rubberised asphalts in UK and EU.

How do we recycle tyres in asphalt: the existing technologies – The use of RTR in asphalt pavements started 170 years ago, with an experiment involving natural rubber with bitumen in the 1840s, attempting to capture the flexible nature of rubber in a longer lasting paving surface. Nowadays, there are two main processes of using RTR in asphalt, i.e. the “dry” and the “wet” process. The dry process was introduced by business opportunities. The original wet process was invented in 1960s by Charles McDonald, a materials engineer of the city of Phoenix in Arizona (USA). For this process crumbles of RTR are mixed with bitumen, allowing them to react/swell at temperature of at least 180°C (160°C RTR usually starts breaking down) for a period of forty-five minutes to an hour. The final binder is a multi-phase material with much higher elasticity and viscosity which allows greater film thickness around aggregates. This results in a stiffer and more flexible paving asphalt mix. A number of TR-MBs and mix specifications have been developed based on this original idea and each of them is related to a specific technology. Table 1 lists the most commonly used technologies/specifications in this area.

Since the invention of McDonald, the wet process technology has been used and modified more widely in four states in the US: Arizona, California, Texas and Florida. More recently the wet process has been used also in South Carolina, Nevada and New Mexico. South Africa and Australia started introducing bitumen-rubber as a binder for asphalt and for seals from the early 1980s and mid 1970s, respectively. In Europe rubberised asphalt has been used sporadically and “in waves” in several states but mainly in Portugal, Spain, Italy, Czech Republic and Sweden. Nowadays the rubberised asphalt technology is being adopted in many other parts of the world and it’s mainly driven by business opportunities.

Benefits and issues of using rubberized asphalt mixtures – There is a long-lasting debate on whether is better to invest on promoting rubberised asphalt by using the dry-process or the wet-process. The debate is centred on technical and economical aspects; the dry-process has great potential to recycle higher amount of RTR and it has the great advantage of being ready to be adopted by any asphalt plant (RTR is added directly in the mixer). Furthermore, the resulting mixture can help obtain functional surface layers which increase skid resistance and reduce noise. However, there are not too many successful dry-process applications worldwide because the design life of this type of asphalt mixture rarely has shown to be satisfactory.

On the other hand, rubberised asphalt mixtures manufactured through the wet-process have been used in different parts of the world as solutions for different quality problems. Despite some downsides, in the majority of the cases, rubberised asphalt mixtures have demonstrated enhanced road and pavement performance worldwide. The preference for using this particular technology was due to benefits such as increased skid resistance, improved flexibility and crack resistance and also reduced traffic noise and asphalt thickness. In other words, rubberised asphalts obtained by using a better-performing binder (wet process) rather than using waste tyre-derive aggregates (dry process), have convinced engineers and road authorities around the world to adopt more often the wet-process. These better-performing binders (RTR-MBs) are usually manufactured in large stationary tanks or in mobile blending units that pump into agitated stationary or mobile storage tanks to be used directly at the job site (Figure 1). These materials require constant agitation, with special equipment, to keep the RTR particles uniformly distributed. Phase separation during storage (usually sinking of RTR to the bottom of tanks) is a big issue of these binders that needs therefore to be produced directly on the job-site or rarely transported to the field within tanks equipped with special augers. Furthermore, these rubberised asphalts needs trained personnel during the laying and compaction process due to reduced workability of the mixtures. This type of asphalt manufacturing and paving practices are not typical for contractors in UK and EU, therefore the adoption of this technology would need up-front costs from contractors and specialised training for the workers. Furthermore, it is a fact that the wet process rubberised asphalt mixtures cost more than conventional asphalts, mainly because the related benefits are linked to the need of higher amount of costly bitumen.

New frontiers for rubberised asphalt mixtures – Recycled waste tyres were successfully and widely incorporated into asphalt mixtures in 1970s and in 1988 a definition for rubberised bitumen was included in the American Society for Testing and Materials (ASTM) D8 and later specified in ASTM D6114-97.

In 1992 the patent of the McDonald’s process expired and the material is now considered a part of the public domain. Since then, considerable research has been done worldwide to validate and improve technologies related to rubberised asphalt pavements. The mainstream of research aims at maintaining the good performance shown by wet-process asphalt mixtures but solving the issues related to the binder’s manufacturing and storage, and to the rubberised asphalt laying and compaction. Several solutions are being proposed such as coupling the modification of binder with other polymers, reducing storage temperatures, using waxes to reduce operative temperatures, changing the delivery process by using pellets of modified binder, and very recently producing a modifier that uses a blend of heavy oil and devulcanised tyre rubber. All these solutions are working in principle although they are usually not economically viable in the short term. For this reason further inter-sectorial research, possibly between academia and industry, is needed to think about a widespread application.

Towards a widespread use of rubberised asphalt mixtures

The only really successful application of rubberised asphalt in road pavements are where governments, not only associations, supported by research have exploited these technologies. A proof of this statement is given by the state of California (USA) where since 2005 a government mandate supports the increasing adoption of these technologies in asphalt mixture. From January 2013 the usage of rubberised asphalt pavements needs to reach a level of at least 35% of the total weight of asphalt paving materials produced in the country. This level recently rose to 50% and the main reason is the prediction of substantial savings in the long term.

On this basis it my conviction that the widespread use of rubberised asphalt technologies is a sustainable practice that should be supported within the countries where the waste tyres are recovered. In fact, there is enough evidence that rubberised asphalt family of technologies works and if it can be introduced on a wider scale, it represents a readily available solution to re-use large amounts of waste tyres. Road pavements are surely not the only solution for re-using waste tyres however, in countries where producer responsibility regimes exists, governments and tyre recycling associations should seriously consider this option and cooperate to understand how to implement it. If imposing practices through polices is not a viable option, convincing the road pavements industry with economical support, for instance in terms of tax benefits for opting to recycle waste, could create a win-win situation. Another approach could be to support collaborative academia-industry research to solve technical issues towards making this application more economically and commercially viable. In a world that is awakening to the challenge posed by environmental issues, making the choice to solve the matter locally by investing in research or supporting industry, should be preferred to waste tyre burning and exporting. These practices might be economically convenient but undoubtedly contribute to higher global emissions and only serves to shift the problem in space, and delays a viable and tangible solution.

EXPERT VIEW – BRAKING BAD

Following his extremely popular presentation at the NTDA Tyre Industry Conference 2015, Daniel Bennett, CEO of Yellow Brand Protection highlights the danger of Fake Tyres and what you can do to protect yourself and your customers.

According to the International Chamber of Commerce (ICC), the counterfeiting and piracy market is expected to reach $1.77 trillion in 2015, a shocking 2.4% of global GDP. Perhaps even more disturbing, it is a 300% increase compared to 2014. Most of the illicit trade takes place online. The problem is now so widespread that it not only impacts every industry and product category, but it is also affecting government tax receipts. If left unchecked, a huge chunk of sales could be lost to counterfeiters.

FAKE PRODUCTS CAUSE REAL TRAGEDIES

Given that the brand is your most valuable asset, the question of how best to protect it in a digital environment needs to be addressed urgently. It is not just about preventing lost revenues and damage to the brand; it is about protecting consumers too. If someone buys a fake fashion item, there is a limited impact. But if people purchase fake pharmaceuticals or counterfeit tyres, for example, the consequences can be catastrophic.

Sadly, the available statistics show that fake products are already causing enormous human suffering. According to the World Health Organisation, one million people die from consuming counterfeit medication – annually.

HOW MANY SUBSTANDARD TYRES ON UK ROADS?

For anyone who thinks the tyre industry is immune from piracy, the growing number of reports to the contrary is a wake-up call. TV programmes like Fake Britain do a good job of highlighting the problem. But when 31% of the UK population are buying fakes in good faith, much remains to be done.

We know there are counterfeit tyres produced in Asia and sold around the world. These are poorly made knockoffs that usually sell for a fraction of the brand-name tyres they resemble. These sub-standard products threaten road safety, as unwitting motorists think they have purchased the real thing at a bargain.

According to our own research on five leading tyre brands, estimated levels of infringement – including counterfeiting and other brand abuse – are as high as 70% in Chinese online marketplaces. The chart, below, gives an indication of the total volume of marketplace listings for these premium brands (in English and Chinese), and conveys the size of the market as well as the possible size of the problem we face.

Moreover, recent incidents, including the seizure of fake Dunlop tyres in the Philippines and fake SUV tyres in the US, are likely just the tip of the iceberg. According to the Association for Safe International Road Travel, nearly 1.3 million... people die on the roads each year worldwide – which equals 3,287 deaths a day. Defective auto parts are among the top ten causes of traffic accidents.

THE LOWER THE QUALITY, THE GREATER THE RISK

Most counterfeit tyres are made using a low-quality casing on which a tread is grafted. The tread, which plays a crucial role in clearing water and preventing aquaplaning, is merely copied with no attention given to the carefully selected rubber and polymer compounds that go into the original.

The result is both frightening and predictable: a cheap low-quality copy that in no way matches the performance of the original. Data from brake tests comparing branded tyres with counterfeit tyres are revealing. With fake tyres on, the car was still travelling at 31mph at the exact point where it had stopped when fitted with premium tyres. In fact, the car travelled a further 14 metres – three and a half car lengths – before stopping. The risks posed by fake tyres to drivers and pedestrians are obvious, but the damage does not end there. The brand suffers too, as do retailers and distributors, due to loss of revenues and reputation.

WHERE DO THE FAKES COME FROM?

To buy a counterfeit product, you no longer have to visit basement bazaars or hang around dodgy neighbourhoods. All you need is an internet connection. The vast majority of fakes are sold at online marketplaces, web shops and through apps and social media. Around 70% of all counterfeit products come from China, and most are listed at one or several of China’s 150 online marketplaces. The best known are the AliGroup sites, including AliBaba, AliExpress and TaBao. More than half the buyers come from outside China.

With anticipated online sales of $650 billion by 2020, the business potential of the world’s second largest economy is staggering – for both legitimate enterprises and counterfeiters. Today, counterfeiting accounts for a massive 8% of the country’s GDP. To come to grips with China, you need to team up with someone who understands the country, its language and culture. At Yellow Brand Protection, we have a team dedicated solely to China, with three million actions taken so far.

HOW TO FIGHT BACK – BE PROACTIVE

To protect your brand effectively in cyberspace you have to be proactive at all times – and reactive when the need arises. In our experience, the best defence is attack. The most proactive step you can take is to register your Intellectual Property Rights (IPR) – such as patents, trademarks, designs and more – in key markets. That way, you will be ready to pursue a more reactive strategy if you need to, including removing illicit products from a variety of sales channels and/or taking legal action against suspected offenders.

Proactive online measures also include the establishment of a well-structured domain name portfolio, making it harder for counterfeiters to set up a fake website. The principle also applies to a company’s presence on social media platforms and in app stores.

In the “physical” world, there are various protective measures you can take – for example, by integrating certain design-specific details in the products you make copying them more difficult. Security labels (such as holograms) are also very useful.

And a great deal can be achieved by securing the supply chain process and working closely with customs and law enforcement in countries of particular concern.

BE COOL AND METHODICAL

What exactly do you do if fakes of your tyre brand start appearing? At Yellow Brand Protection, we recommend a three-step process: track, analyse and enforce. We start by tracking. If counterfeiting volumes are considerable, the only way to be effective is to use an automated search platform. With the right platform, you can track and monitor up to 1,000 sites – without visiting each one on a daily basis. Then we analyse. Technical analysis is a powerful tool, but when it comes to spotting the tiniest detail and recognizing typical behaviour patterns, experienced personnel are essential. Lastly, we enforce. The trick is to conduct online investigations to gather as much evidence of infringements as you can. This evidence will then be used to bring offenders to justice, close down manufacturing facilities and encourage online marketplaces and other digital channels to remove illegal listings and cease to provide a venue for criminals.

Since the opening of Hamaton Limited in the UK in 2015, the UK team has complimented the strong customer portfolio that Hamaton, in China, have developed since the business was founded in 1993.

Hamaton Limited is both a European TPMS Technical centre, and a Sales and Distribution platform for the wide range of Hamaton manufactured products in Europe.

Hamaton Limited offers a complete TPMS product range, which can be configured to satisfy the needs of the customer. This includes the EU-Pro 1 and 2 sensors, valves, service parts, tools, and consumables. New products will be launched in 2016 and seen at Reifen Essen stand 1C15.

Hamaton are one of the World leaders in Tyre Valve production, supplying 10’s millions of valves each year, covering Passenger cars, Truck and Bus, Agricultural, and Earthmover. Additional products manufactured are tyre tools, inflation gauges, and inflation connector parts.

Furthermore, the company has a comprehensive web database, www.hamaton-tpms.com, which provides all important information about our company and products; www.hamaton-tpms.de for all German speaking customers.

Hamaton Limited benefits from a bright, young, and dedicated team, as well as from the extensive experience of the parent company in China. By strategically selecting the location in the UK, this enables an efficient collaboration with business partners and the best service for both old and new customers, throughout Europe.

In 2016 Hamaton will open their new TPMS Research, Development, and Manufacturing facility in China. This allows Hamaton an annual sensor production capacity of 40 million sensors. This long term investment will accommodate the growing market in the USA, Europe, and prepare for TPMS becoming law in China in 2018.

Hamaton’s primary goal is to offer customers, high quality products, with the best possible service, bringing the parent company closer to the European customer.
If your local supplier is not carrying the range they used to, remember, CES UK Direct hold the widest range of emission control products of any UK site.

So, if...

- Your local supplier hasn’t got it
- It’s dealer only
- It’s not in the ‘book’
- It’s an import
- They don’t make it anymore

Added safety
Directional tread pattern with three wide longitudinal grooves providing effective evacuation of water and good directional stability.

Guaranteed quality
Orium tyres are produced in a European factory belonging to a worldwide leading tyre manufacturer, with 50 years’ experience in European tyre production.

Peace of mind
Providing a range of reliable low-cost tyres for driving all year round.

Manufactured in Europe by one of the world’s largest tyre manufacturers and produced in an ISO 9001-accredited factory, Orium tyres are fully compliant with UNECE regulations.

Orium is an affordable tyre brand that doesn't compromise on safety. Tyres are available in four different ranges: touring, high performance, light truck and commercials and SUV.

Murfitts Industries Limited is an innovative British company leading the way in the manufacture of high quality rubber granules from post consumer tyres. Our products, which we export globally, are used in a huge variety of applications ranging from sports surfaces to carpet underlay. We have achieved a 100% recycling method for all the components in the tyres we use and we believe we are currently the only company in the world who can make this claim.

Company history
The company was formed in late 2001 as the intended implementation of the EC Landfill Directive and the End of Life Vehicle Directive meant that some 450,000 tonnes of tyres a year needed to find a home. Landfill was not an option.

The desire to give some form of environmental benefit coupled with these new legislative drivers opened up the opportunity for us to enter the tyre recycling field.

Two years researching available technologies worldwide resulted in a bespoke built plant, giving us the versatility to produce a range of products from all types of tyres. We can now recycle 100% of all the elements which form part of that tyre including the rubber, steel and fibre.

We recycle 12 million tyres a year and work with many companies and sports associations around the world. We are also trusted by our tyre supplying clients to process their industry bi-product with the least impact possible to the environment, so helping them fulfil their own Corporate Social Responsibilities.

Tested and approved by the respected DEKRA organization, EASYBALANCE is the safe choice. Europe’s No.1 commercial tyre balancing compound developed and manufactured in Sweden since 1994.

Takes seconds to add during tyre fitting.
NO special valve cores required – independently verified in Germany by DEKRA and guaranteed not to cause leakage at the valve core or tyre bead, or cause damage to the inner liner. NO air dryer needed, EASYBALANCE’s micropores absorb moisture in the tyre, actively drying the air and protecting the rim from corrosion. Available in single-use pouches or in bulk tubs, with dosage table and scoop.

TreadReader tyre measurement technology from Sigmavision creates a 3D laser scan of a tyre’s tread depth and tread wear pattern. The detailed tread depth measurements can reveal uneven wear symptomatic of problems such as wheel misalignment or worn suspension. Accurate readings enable tyre replacement at the optimum time to maximise tyre safety and present revenue opportunities to the trade from increased tyre sales or service hours. TreadReader technology is available as a Hand Held scanner and a Drive Over ramp.

Originally a family business, Stapleton’s was founded over 75 years ago. Through a combination of acquisition and organic growth Stapleton’s is now the largest distributor of passenger car tyres in the UK. This honour is largely testament to the company’s founding values of working hard for the customer and making things easy for them. With a nationwide stock holding of 1.7 million tyres, Stapleton’s range is as exhaustive as it is extensive with tyres for all price points from premium to budget, and with a delivery fleet of over 400 vehicles, customers benefit from same day, twice daily and three-times daily schedules, depending on location.

Further supporting customers’ needs for flexibility and convenience, Stapleton’s e-commerce platform ProfitLink allows 24-7 access to live stock availability and prices, a facility to order tyres and provisions to set retail mark ups, thus providing customers the opportunity to present active prices on the spot.

Understanding the needs of the fast moving, highly competitive market, Stapleton’s is focussed on delivering an all-round tyre retail package that customers can rely upon. This pledge is supported by a team of highly experienced sales representatives, who combine the benefits of Stapleton’s expansive national network with the offer of local knowledge and support.

Tyresure Limited

Europe’s leading TPMS service provider and TPMS specialist, Tyresure, have been developing and maintaining complete TPMS solutions in both product and web form for almost a decade. Tyresure’s goal for 2016 is to continue to supply the very best solution for your company, thus providing the full range of OE, aftermarket, programmable, and configurable sensors.

Tyresure have also developed an intricate web-based system that acts as an ordering platform for all distributors, allowing a fluid process from order creation to product arrival. Web features include an extensive online help section, a make, model, and year lookup, and full product range.

Tyresure is also the partner of and largest European wholesaler to TPMS world leader ATEQ, who specialise in tools for both assembly lines and tyre repair shops.

Tyresure ensures coverage of the market by constantly developing their product range, by investigating every new part released. They are then able to identify the OE sensors, develop a replacement sensor, and all of the servicing parts required. This has allowed a complete range of TPMS diagnostic tools, TPMS workshop tools, service valves, and service kits, for all OE, and major aftermarket TPMS sensors, which are essential in workshops around Europe.

For more information about the company and the products, please visit www.tyresure-tpms.com.
